Forthcoming Publication to Review Georgist Scholarship
Schalkenbach Foundation Sponsors New Periodical

NEW YORK, N. Y.—The first issue of the American Journal of Economics and Sociology will be off the presses about October 1. The publication will appear quarterly under a grant from the Robert Schalkenbach Foundation, in the interest of a synthesis of the social sciences.

Students of Henry George will remember that he said, “I can but suggest some thoughts, which may, perhaps, serve as hints for further thought.”

The new “American Journal of Economics and Sociology” is an attempt to explore in a scholarly manner both fields of thought in which Henry George broke ground. The hope of its sponsors is that this effort will engender the interest and investigation of scholars in the “further thought” that George suggested.

The board of editors includes distinguished authorities from American academic ranks. The first issue will contain an introduction by Dr. John Dewey, a foreword by Dr. Franz Oppenheimer, and the following articles:

“Science and Values in a World of Change” by George Raymond Geiger, of Antioch College.

“Tax Leverage for Efficient Land Exploitation” by Donald E. Ibach, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

“Ines of Social Instability in Venezuela” by Raymond E. Crist, of the University of Illinois.

“Wages and Trade Unions” by Franz Oppenheimer, of the University of Frankfurt.

“Internationalism and Europeanism” by Francis Neilson, of Ripon College.

Among the contributors to future issues will be Harold J. Ring, of the University of Pittsburgh; Morris D. Fuchs, of New York University; Irving Mark, of Brooklyn College; Egidio Treviño, of the University of Buenos Aires; Baldemero Argente, of Madrid, Spain, and Ernest E. Ziesler of Chicago.

Subscription to the American Journal of Economics and Sociology will be $3.00 a year (4 issues). Single issues will be obtainable at $1.00 each.

The unique venture, the first in which Georgist economics will appear in a form calculated to challenge the attention of University scholars, deserves the support of all Georgists. It should do much to bring about a more nearly complete integration of college economics departments with the Henry George School of Social Science. Full information can be obtained from the Robert Schalkenbach Foundation, 80 East 39th Street, New York City. Will Larmer, formerly Editor of The Freeman, is Editor of the new Journal. Frank Chodorov, Director of the Henry George School of Social Science, is business manager.
