

The Henry George School in News

ST. LOUIS now has earnest groups of new Georgists studying basic economics in several new neighborhood libraries, churches and a shopping center, in the delightful residential sections for which the city is noted.

Loral Swofford, director, and Noah Alper are throwing their combined weight into big plans for "St. Louis in '66," and having heard something of the plans for the city's 200th anniversary, we can only urge all Georgists to focus on the Midwest next summer. Come by river boat, covered wagon or stage coach, but don't miss the fun and hospitality in the wonderful old city from which the Lewis and Clark Expedition set forth to conquer the West.

LOS ANGELES has launched a new term of studies in Political Economy and allied subjects including Commerce and Industry, which follows the plan originated in Chicago by John Lawrence Monroe.

Courses in Fundamental Economics are being held in Santa Monica, Santa Ana, Glendale, Anaheim, South Pasadena, Van Nuys and at the school's headquarters in Los Angeles. A fee of $9.50 covers the textbook, Progress and Poverty, and all lesson materials for the ten-week course.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA announces a seminar planned by George W. Parker on "What Taxes Do," to be held January 15th for county and city officials, civic leaders and school board members.

An article by Robert de Fremery in the Commercial & Financial Chronicle, a New York weekly, compares the fractional reserve banking system with the de Angelis salad oil operation. Copies of this are available from the Henry George School, 833 Market Street, San Francisco, California 94103.

MICHIGAN has a new Henry George School office at 4134 West Thirteen Mile Road, Royal Oak. The former office was in Detroit. Robert D. Benton, director, has been elected president of the Detroit Adult Education Association.

TORONTO'S new director, Laurie Mannell, has reported ten classes resulting from advertisements inserted in newspapers. "Everything behind schedule, thoroughly confusing and completely disorganized," he writes, "in other words, perfectly normal."

NEW JERSEY offers basic courses at the Newark headquarters, 78 Clinton Avenue, on Thursday evenings, and in nearby Elizabeth, Summit, New Brunswick and Red Bank on Tuesdays. A five-week Tax Seminar is in progress at Carteret.

NEW YORK faculty member Paul S. Nix, Jr., a research engineer with Socony Mobil, has been elected to the school's board of trustees.

The Latin American Alumni will present a fiesta on December 4th at 9 p.m. at 27 Union Square. Proceeds are for the Henry George School of Latin America.

On November 5th Dr. N. K. Sethi will speak on "India From the Inside." Films will be shown on November 12th, and on the 19th a psychology demonstration will be given by AFTLI.