Dear Bob:

Thanks for the eight degrees of charity. I am still not sure that I could list them, all 8, but I think I get the idea.

I do hope that Moses M. did list as one degree near the top, the charity of 'not interfering with another' i.e. 'not putting a tax on him'.

Oh well.

Re: Southfield. There is still the same old progress and growth, which exceeds anything else going on in this country at the present time. The development has been so phenomenal for so long that we are beginning to take it for granted. IBM has just bought another 20 acres for a giant new development so everybody ho-hums it and says, Yes, sure, that's Southfield. Why shouldn't they want to come to Southfield, everybody else is here. Don't people want to be near their competitors? Talk of King having a Dream. That's nothing. This Southfield is the dream I had when I first read Progress and Poverty in 1945. This is the actual realization of a great vision. People still say the wonderful growth is due to the sewers, expressways and shopping center. But those things are present in cities that are dying. So our faith is strengthened our hearts gladdened because we know it works. Bob B.
