

St. Louis Extension

SIRS: We of the St. Louis Extension miss The Freeman but are grateful for the Henry George News and assure you we will do our part in subscribing and contributing news articles and editorials.

The St. Louis Extension is going full steam ahead under the able leadership of Mr. William E. Hoeflin. Mr. Hoeflin has put his heart and soul into the work of the school for the past several years and is continuing to do so and his personality inspires others to do their best to make the school a success. In spite of the smaller enrollment due to the war, he is always encouraging and instills confidence in the rest of us. He has plans for expanding the school, and we will help him spread the teachings of Henry George throughout Missouri.

On October 22, 1943, Mr. Hoeflin held a meeting of the new "Ways and Means Committee," the nucleus of the organization to increase the school's faculty and students. The record and hopes of the St. Louis extension were discussed, and we resolved to build a sound organization prepared to do bigger things when the boys come back. There is a prayer in our hearts that we may be instrumental in keeping our boys from wars in the future. With that goal in our minds and with determination in our hearts, we can't miss.

The St. Louis Extension sends warm greetings to all other branches of the Henry George School. We shall be watching for ideas and suggestions in our paper from you, and it is our hope that closer bonds will be knit through the medium of the News.

You will hear from us frequently. We are very much alive and burning with a desire to further the work of the school.

We wish the Henry George News great success!

MARY BERGER.
