California, . . . without interfering with bona fide amateur boxing, or amateur boxing exhibitions."

Proposition No. 4, entitled "Abatement of Nuisances," is a law suspended by referendum. It is locally known as the "Redlight Abatement Act," and one of its purposes is to make "investments in exploitation of prostitution insecure," and thus diminish the social evil. It holds the landlord accountable for conduct of tenants.

Propositions Nos. 2 and 39 are initiative amendments put forth by the temperance people and have for their object state-wide prohibition of the liquor traffic.

Proposition No. 39 is to correct an omission of the date on which the provisions of proposition No. 2 go into effect, extending the time of one section three months and of another 14 months, thus giving liquor men and their employes a better opportunity to readjust themselves should the temperance law be passed.

Proposition No. 47, entitled "Prohibition Elections," is an initiative amendment put forth by the opponents of state-wide prohibition. It provides among other things that liquor elections shall not be held oftener than every eight years. The negative argument says: "This amendment is unfair and misleading. It seeks to disfranchise the people by making a vote on one issue settle an entirely different matter. There are voters who favor local prohibition, but who are opposed to state-wide prohibition. Under this amendment they could not choose between the two."

The fact that California has heavy investments in vineyards from which wine as well as raisin grapes are obtained is an important factor in the discussion, the "wets" claiming that prohibition will ruin this industry; while the "drys" are asserting that wine grapes are now raised almost at a loss, and that raisin grapes from which there is the most profit will not be disturbed by prohibition.

No one can deny that these referendums are great popular educators.

AUSTRALIAN POLITICS.

Corowa, N. S. W., Australia, Sept. 25, 1914. The federal election in May, 1913, gave the liberals a majority of one in the House of Representatives, and the labor party a majority of 29 in the Senate. As expected, the parliament proved to be unworkable, for bills passed by the House were rejected by the Senate.

The ministry then resolved to try to obtain a dissolution of both houses. A bill was passed twice by the House, and defeated twice in the Senate. This formed a "deadlock," as defined by the federal constitution, and the Governor-General granted a double dissolution.

This is the first time such a thing has happened. In the ordinary course, the whole of the House and half of the Senate retire every three years. Now both houses were wholly dissolved, and a fresh start had to be made.

The liberal ministry had appointed an Interstate Commission, which has been taking evidence on the tariff. The liberals proposed to adjust the tariff and correct any anomalies, in accordance with the report to be made by the Commission; to adopt proportional representation for the Senate, and preferential voting for the House.

The labor party promised to amend the tariff by making it more effectively protectionist at once, without waiting for the report of the Interstate Commission; and to introduce the initiative and referendum.

The elections were held on September 5th, and resulted in a victory for the labor party, which has a majority of 10 in the House and 31 in the Senate.

The Cook government has resigned, and a new ministry has been formed by the leader of the labor party, Andrew Fisher.

INCIDENTAL SUGGESTIONS

JINGOISM AND PROTECTIONISM.

New York, Oct. 21, 1914.

On page 23 of "Collier's" for Oct. 24 is an article signed by E. C. Patterson, vice president and general manager of P. F. Collier & Son, entitled "Patriotism That Pays." In substance, it is an appeal to all Americans to buy none but American goods. It must cause regret to every genuine democrat to find so able a periodical, and one so usually progressive except for its occasional catering to race prejudice —thus extending the fallacious principle which is embodied in the protective tariff. The thoughtless will undoubtedly applaud what they will interpret as the voicing of enlightened patriotism; but the judicious cannot fail to grieve.

Our European critics are wont to castigate us as a race of shopkeepers, incapable of being moved by any higher ideal than that of dollar-chasing; and so conspicuous an example of the lower nationalism, appearing in a magazine of the general character of "Collier's," will not escape their attention, nor fail to do its part in damaging our international reputation.

It is true, as Mr. Patterson points out, that a certain class of American snobs fawn at the feet of the older nations, and worship a foreign label, regardless of the quality of the goods for which it stands; but their fault is not properly rectified by the encouragement of a narrow chauvinism, which can see no good in anything outside our own boundaries. Between Europeomania and an egotistic provincialism there is a rational and more creditable middle course.

At a time like this, when the unchaining of war's horrors abroad should open the eyes of even the most unthinking to the evil and the perils of a narrow nationalism, the American periodical which seeks to decry any phase of the broad international spirit renders a distinct disservice to his country. American manufacturers do not need to be coddled. If they are able to demonstrate superiority, let them win favor through proof of merit, not through a shallow appeal to jingoism. Teach the public to demand quality, under whatever label it is produced; and let our manufacturers know that they must prove themselves worthy, if they desire patronage
