

TAXATION

A PLAIN TALK FOR PLAIN PEOPLE

BY

JAMES H. CANFIELD

"He that apprehendeth an evil, yet holdeth his peace, he doeth not rightly toward the common weal."

NEW YORK
THE SOCIETY FOR POLITICAL EDUCATION
4 MORTON STREET
1883

COPYRIGHT BY
G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
1883

Press of
G. P. Putnam's Sons
New York

PREFATORY NOTE.

The words, phrases, sentences—even the paragraphs—of various authors, quoted again and again in the lecture-room and in conversation with one's pupils, become, in time, an integral part of one's daily speech, and frequently their real origin ceases to be remembered. Certain economic truths, and even the expression of these, become a common heritage.

I frankly acknowledge this indebtedness, in lieu of spending much time in what would too often be a vain attempt to locate correctly many quotation marks in this paper, which has for its sole purpose—utility.

J. H. C.

LAWRENCE, KANS., September, 1883.