

lying lips gain the presence of the president of the Philippine republic and make him their prisoner.

Suppose that the British had by such treachery captured Washington at Valley Forge, they would have justly received the condemnation of Christendom. Suppose Gen. MacArthur had been captured by such treacherous methods by the Filipinos, then "Filipino treachery" would have received world-wide condemnation. Yet the rabble is heaping encomiums on our officers for an act of base treachery, unrivaled in the history of civilized warfare, but the truly brave and the truly patriotic will, after the first flush of exultation is over, always hang their heads in shame when they remember that Funston and those who ordered or aided in that treacherous plot are Americans.—Hon. John A. Gilkey, of Montesano, Wash., in the Seattle Times.

"MONOPOLY HAS THE NATION BY THE THROAT."

Extract from the address of Judge Edward F. Dunne, president of the Iroquois club, of Chicago, at the banquet given by the club in memory of Jefferson, April 13.

Monopoly has the nation by the throat. One large corporation practically controls all the steel manufacturing industries of the country; another all the illuminating oil; another all the anthracite coal; two control our sugar; two our matches, and four kill and sell to the people of the United States all the meat they eat, and embalm and can all the scraps that are left over and find ready sale for the same to the government of the United States for consumption by soldiers in the regular army. Nearly every article of merchandise in common use, from the cradles in which the babies are rocked to the coffins in which we lay our dead to rest, are controlled by the trusts, and Mr. McKinley's late attorney general declared that the imperial power of the republic was powerless to manage, regulate or control them. The power which can be and is so energetically used to force a government upon 10,000,000 protesting and unwilling people 10,000 miles away becomes palsied and paralyzed when it comes in contact with a man, or an aggregation of men, which controls $10,000,000.

The cabinet is composed of plutocrats, or the tools of plutocrats; the senate chamber is filled with them; the choice appointments in the army and navy are given to their relations or satellites, and through such men and their influence the spirit of imperialism is rapidly impregnating the official departments of the country.

Republican simplicity and virtue are disappearing. The principles of the declaration of independence have been repudiated and trampled under foot. The Monroe doctrine, which has been asserted with unanimity and courage by democratic and republican administrations for 75 years, has been cast to the winds.

CROWDED OUT.

Dr. Edward Everett Hale says in the course of an article appearing in the Christian Register not long ago: "There is no doubt that the work of the world becomes lighter for those who are in it"—meaning evidently those who are in the work, or have work to do—"but what," he asks, "shall we do with those who are crowded out?" Those thus referred to as "crowded out" of the world's work—crowded out of opportunity to earn a livelihood, such opportunity being monopolized in other ways—he goes on to add, are typified by the writers of two letters which he prints—letters received by him "within 24 hours." "I could easily," he says, "print 50 more such letters if it would do any good." There is no end to them apparently. The story told in them, given condensed in the Friends' Intelligencer of last week, runs as follows:

The writer of one of the two letters is a business man, a salesman, 55 years old, who is crowded out because the factory with which he has been connected "will probably merge into a trust." He is not needed; he has the best recommendations, but the prospect of a place is not promising; with a family dependent upon him, the prospect is not cheerful. The other writer is an older man, formerly a soldier, who gets "state aid" of $12 a month, and a national pension of six dollars a month, but who is afflicted by rheumatism, and finds that for any work which he is able to do every employer prefers a "hustling" younger man.

Yet "the country is prosperous!" We hear no end of the assertions to that effect. It is so represented by the trade papers—and are not most of the great journals of the country trade papers?—but especially by the mouthpieces of a certain stripe of partisans very abundant in these days. The country is prosperous, but prosperous for whom? Prosperous for the trusts and their servitors—so long as they can manage to keep on good terms with this mighty modern master of men—but how is it with the rest? The "crowded out," high and low, can tell, and some who have a racking, most oppressive fear of them, an innumerable host, lest they may be crowded out—they can tell, too, if they only would. Tens of thousands of them are getting ready to tell, and some day they will tell in a voice that will shake the land.—Editorial in City and State (Philadelphia) of Mar. 23.

NO RACE PROBLEM IN NEW ZEALAND.

"The fact that London papers commented so severely on the expected acceptance of a detachment of Maoris for service in South Africa," said a visiting New Zealander, "shows ignorance of the nature and appearance of the New Zealand aborigines. It is generally known that they are infinitely superior to the bushmen of Australia, but the papers have referred to them as a race inferior to the Indians, who have not been used in the Boer war because their employment would have been 'an insult to the Dutch.' As a matter of fact, neither statement is quite true. The Maoris in question were more than likely half-breeds. They are not, even when full-blooded, a black, or, until old age, a dark race. Young Maoris of unmixed blood are light brown, and when there is a mixture of European blood they cannot, in color, be distinguished from white men. They are a race so noble that intermarriage has not been considered a disgrace to white men, and in this way there has been created a half-breed people of fine intelligence and high character. It is well known that many members of the New Zealand parliament are Maoris, some of them full-blooded, and the colonial secretary was at one time a half-breed.

"There is no 'race problem' in New Zealand. Maoris and Europeans live together in mutual respect, their children attending the same schools and intermarriage is common. In addition to the high racial standing of the Maoris they have shown as a people a genius for warfare. Before the coming of the white men they had perfected a fine system of attack, and especially of defense. So that they would have made good soldiers had Mr. Chamberlain accepted their proffered service, and only the idea of their being Maoris could have given offense, as their color would very likely not have betrayed it at all. And as to the British government's refusal to use Indian troops, that is due, as everyone ought to know, to the fact that England has good reason to refrain from allowing her Indian subjects to taste white blood. The 'superior race' idea has to be
