

New York Grows in "Air Power"

A discussion of Progress and Poverty will be held on the Columbia University Seminar program on March 8 at one P. M. on television station WJZ-TV.

Robert Clancy, the school's director, has appeared on a number of popular programs, and has spoken on the Fordham University station, where Lancaster M. Greene was also a guest. Mr. Clancy will be on the Alma Dettinger program on WQXR on March 4. He was also interviewed by Barry Gray; and by Maggi McNellis, with two other guests: Lucrezia Bori and Walter Hampden, who spoke of Henry George.

Dorothy Sara, handwriting analyst and member of the school faculty, will be interviewed by Mary Margaret McBride on WJZ March 19. Though Miss McBride is primarily interested in her guest as a graphologist, it would be very strange if the bubbling Dorothy failed to mention her chief hobby—guess what. Miss Sara will speak at the Friday Evening program at the school on March 19.

Henry Steeger, publisher of Argosy Magazine, will be the speaker on March 6, and documentary films will be shown the evenings of March 13 and 29.

John Lawrence Monroe, director of the Chicago Henry George School, will be a much anticipated speaker on March 31 at the New York faculty dinner where he will bring up-to-the-minute news of the Commerce and Industry program which has aroused so much interest among Georgists.

Ezra Cohen, one of the school trustees, will speak at the Exchange Club on March 5 on "Liberation from Taxation." Stanley Sinclair, one of our cheerful News writers, will give two talks on "The Shrinking Dollar," in New York and Brooklyn. David Goldstein, chairman of the speakers bureau, will take a March 18 assignment at the Sisterhood of Bushwick Jewish Center and will discuss current events.
