

The School in the News

ST. LOUIS is offering nine basic classes and an advanced class in The Science of Political Economy. The Henry George Woman's Club held its fifth annual card party in March, and like everything this group attempts, it was a social and financial success. Mrs. Fred Blum, as general chairman, planned it well. Mrs. Rose Schachner, in reporting it, said "where there is right thought there will be right action."

SAN DIEGO classes are under way in basic economics, and a forum on Money and Credit has begun at 3058 El Cajon Boulevard. The meetings will be on Tuesdays at 7:30 P.M. in the waiting room of R. G. Snell, D.C., a recent graduate. Two advanced classes in Protection or Free Trade will begin in April.

Eva Maxwell, extension director, reports finding a new (to her) picture of Henry George similar to an etching, which was used fifty years ago by Elbert Hubbard in one of his books. Copies of this photograph were presented, along with a copy of The Land Question by Henry George, to volunteer workers who helped with the addressing of announcements.

SAN FRANCISCO director Robert Tideman very graciously excused our regrettable error in publishing, on page ten of the March issue, a picture, not of Bob but of his father, Henry L. T. Tideman. Henry Tideman was an engineer, a founder of the Chicago extension, and a valued contributor to HGN. He bore a strong resemblance to his son, Robert, though he had one distinguishing feature, a neat, white mustache. Henry Tideman was the father of Mrs. John L. (Marian) Monroe, and progenitor of a noble line of Georgists. This well-mannered family has always been a favorite with "old timers."

DETROIT Henry Georgists enjoyed a March dinner meeting on the 21st with Don S. Miller, retired associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts, Wayne University, as guest speaker. "Land Value Taxation vs. the Income Tax" was the subject, and S. James Clarkson was chairman.

BOSTON'S director, M. S. Lurio, sent a letter with listings of "recommended reading" to graduates recently. Guess what was given top billing — The Henry George News. Dorothy Sara will be the speaker at a luncheon in Boston on April 6th at Lucerne Cafe, opposite North Station. She is "a witty speaker and a nationally known graphologist as well as a good Georgist." This is Mr. Lurio's comment and he knows Dorothy.

NEW YORK Friday-at-Eight friends will have a chance to hear Dorothy Sara on April 5th in an illustrated talk on "Handwriting Analysis." She is the author of a book by that title, and is a popular instructor at New York headquarters. She is also a most valued and helpful editorial assistant on The Henry George News, and is a member of the committee which will help to plan the program for the annual conference of the Henry George School to be held in New York in July.

Dr. David Neiman of the Academy for Higher Jewish Learning will be the speaker on April 26th on an appropriate inter-faith topic, "Jewish Thought in New Testament Times."

Robert Clancy, New York director, has been invited to attend the Mid-Atlantic Regional Conference of the President's Committee on Education Beyond the High School, to be held at New York University April 30th and May first. Mr. Clancy was interviewed April 3rd on John Wingate's program on WOR, resulting in numerous inquiries about the school.
