

The Henry George School in the News

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA did it! The first of a series of TV programs sponsored by the Henry George School was viewed on February 26th over KQED (Channel 9), featuring a panel discussion, "Can We Afford Honest Assessors?" The expert panel members were Dr. Irene Hickman, Sacramento's County Assessor; Squire Needham Williams, Jr., Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky; David Robinson, former President, California Real Estate Association; and Dr. Arch Woodruff, Provost, University of Hartford. Harry Pollard, extension director of Los Angeles, was the moderator.

Readers of HGN will be well aware of the point of view ably defended by Dr. Hickman. News of Kentucky's experience with 100 percent assessment of LVT comes as a surprise, and was reported in Robert Tideman's column in the Pacific Sun on February 8th. (See pg. one).

LOS ANGELES dramatized "The Loneliness of the Reformers" in a weekend seminar at school headquarters February 3rd and 4th, closing with a banquet. The proceedings were recorded for broadcast on KPFK-FM. The reformers all proved to be activists, who, seeing a wrong, have proceeded with stout hearts and sometimes surprising success, to right it.

The vivid guests included, from Sacramento, Dr. Irene Hickman, and Ted Gwartney, an appraiser and president of the Alumni Group; San Francisco's HGS executive, Robert Tideman; from San Diego, the director, Roy Davidson, Councilman Floyd Morrow, and John Nagy, president of Statewide Homeowners Association. Representing Los Angeles was the host and instigator, Harry Pollard, the well known writer, Ray Bradbury (Fahrenheit 451), Frank Goble, research expert, and Paul Marks, of Youth Resources, Inc.

An intensive "second basic" course in "Applied Economics" began in February at headquarters, under the direction of Harry Pollard. Two textbooks are required for the ten-lesson course and study materials are included in the $9.50 tuition charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Pollard announced the marriage of their daughter, Jackie, to Robert Lee Woods II, on February 25th. Pleasant news! Best wishes from all!

ST. LOUIS introduced a two-session course in the Economic Science of Public Revenue, under direction of Noah D. Alper, president of Public Revenue Education Council. The announcement was mailed to a Chamber of Commerce list—this drew a few speaking engagements and favorable mention on KTVI TV. The first session was held on February 13th, using a 45-page 18' x 27' flip chart. Accompanying material was provided by PREC for study before the next session. Mr. Alper deals with the nature and relationship of the factors of production and natural sources of public revenue—not taxes. Consideration is given to the cost of government, housing, jobs, wages and the general welfare.

NEW JERSEY conducts five-session courses during February and March, at the Jonathan Dayton Regional High School in Springfield; the Perth Amboy Adult School; and the HGS headquarters in Newark. Afternoon meetings at headquarters feature films and discussion and are open to the public.

TORONTO'S Alumni Group has announced its executive panel of officers for 1967 through its director, Laurie Mannel. It will be nice to meet and Why?

SALVATORE V. MANGANARO, one of the students in Sydney Mayers' Public Speaking class at the HGS in New York, presented the group with this new slant on the Henry George five cent cigar.

Many world leaders, writers, philosophers and statesmen have hailed Henry George as a great social philosopher, and his works have been endorsed as worthy of serious thought. They found his theories to be sound and sensible. Why in the world haven't we made greater progress?

Henry George was a contemporary of Karl Marx. Yet today more than half the world's population is under the rule of the ideology of the latter, while in comparison the promulgation and application of the theories of Henry George seem to move very slowly. We have good, effective medicine to cure many ills, yet the patients take the wrong, ineffectual medicine, why?

During the depression a common remark was "what this country needs is a good five cent cigar." So a man who was imbued with love for his countrymen set about to be of service. He bought a good crop of tobacco, selected the best leaves, and hired the most skilled cigar makers. The cigar he produced was good enough to sell for a dollar, but he marketed it at five cents.

Feeling proud that he was offering a truly good product for so little, he sat down and waited for the approbation of his fellowmen. It never came. He had to declare bankruptcy and sell his entire stock at a loss. Another enterprising businessman bought the stock, raised the price to a dollar, and sold out immediately at a vast profit.

Is there a moral to this story that can be applied to the acceptance of Henry George's proposal?

The idea that a cigar costing only five cents was inferior was so strongly fixed in the minds of smokers that its quality went unnoticed. Is our remedy so simple that it passes unnoticed? The second businessman made a minor adjustment and his venture was a complete success. What adjustment can we make? We must ponder this question.

We have a good product. It may need repackaging, good merchandising and inspired salesmanship in order to arouse the interest and enthusiasm that will batter down the doors at the legislatures and demand the reforms needed to make the remedy of Henry George the established order. We Georgists must work conscientiously and energetically toward the realization of these aims.
