NEW JERSEY invites all readers to a reception and dedication at its new headquarters, 149 South Harrison Street, East Orange, New Jersey, on November 17th at 2 p.m. There will be greetings from the president, Dr. Geoffrey W. Esty and the dean, Alexander M. Goldfinger. Miss V. G. Peterson and Lancaster M. Greene of New York will also speak. Cocktails and dinner will be served at the adjoining hotel. Specific reservations are requested for dinner. The prices range from $4.50 to $6.50 (for prime ribs of beef). The new location is convenient to public transportation.

Ellwood A. Shepherd of Maplewood was elected to the board of trustees of the New Jersey school following the death in June of Alvin G. Searles, who was the trustee-treasurer and a valued faculty member.

LONG ISLAND, N.Y. under directorship of Stan Rubenstein had 230 beginning students in eight classes and a high percentage are returning regularly. In two classes which he himself teaches nearly all of the 55 who enrolled are still coming. In these classes the condensed Progress and Poverty edition from England is the text, although several students have bought the complete edition and are using it as a reference work. The majority of pupils are public school teachers or engineers. Advanced classes will start in December.

In addition Mr. Rubenstein has invited Long Island students to take the correspondence course and he is correcting these papers in his home. He also sends out nearly a thousand newsletters every two months. Mr. Rubenstein is a history teacher, is married and has a family. But he seems to enjoy the full schedule he has arranged for himself and is pleased with the successful results.

CHICAGO has three classes known as Adventures in Economic Conversations, at three locations: the Peoples Church, Indiana Boundary Park and California Park. Mina Olson, the executive secretary is in charge.

LOS ANGELES director of college activities, William B. Truehart, is enrolled at the University of California, Riverside, carrying a large study load on the last lap of his work for a B.A. degree. He is also teaching economics at Azusa Pacific College with 27 students enrolled for the 3-unit course in economics.

SAN DIEGO friends helped Mr. and Mrs. James L. Palmer of Chula Vista celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary recently. Mr. Palmer is president of the HGS board of directors. Another director, Colonel Archie V. Gerard has retired from professional life a second time and will devote more of his efforts to the Statewide Incentive Taxation Committee on which he has served for ten years.

Our young and successful Geogist star, Ted Gwartney, has taken a wife, and a midwestern one at that! Now Mr. John Theodore Gwartney may find himself staying east of the Rockies longer than he anticipated. Mrs. Gwartney was Gretchen Lee Rhett of Marion, Indiana. John T. is city assessor of Southfield, Michigan, and his many friends wish them long happiness. Their home is at 19820 West 12 Mile, Southfield.
