New Home—Henry George School

The Henry George School of Social Science international headquarters is moving to a new location in New York City. The building at 30 East 29th Street has been sold and the school will move to its new home at 50 East 69th Street, located in a section of fine residences and educational institutions just half a block from Hunter College.

The new headquarters building, the former residence of the late Otto L. Dommerich, is a 26-room fire-proof structure, practically ready-made for school purposes and most admirably suited for classroom and office use. The move is expected to be made during the month of June without interrupting study classes and the work of the Correspondence Course Department.
