

New York Headquarters

The home of the New York School of Social Science is bathed in the faint golden sunlight of spring. Every afternoon a driver with a cart full of flowers stops at each door in the block. Once a strolling musician played old nostalgic tunes while we were concentrating on land, rent and wages.

Through this door pass Georgists and prospective Georgists — thoughtful people who believe with varying enthusiasm in the philosophy of Henry George. Some are mildly interested and some will talk of nothing else. The majority are somewhere in between.

The school has eight classrooms, an auditorium, coffee shop, library and offices. The Board of Trustees consists of Anna George de Mille, President; John Dewey, Honorary President; John C. Lincoln, Vice President; Otto K. Dorn, Treasurer; Ezra Cohen; Lancaster M. Greene; Gordon Macklin; Francis Neilson; William S. O'Connor and Leonard T. Recker. Margaret E. Bateman is Director.

A weekly discussion group is being organized under the leadership of Sidney J. Abelson, the first session to be held at the school, 50 East 69th Street, on Friday, May 10th at 8 p.m. There will be four sessions, one a week, and the purpose is to help train people for discussion. "Illustrate Georgist points with dramatic examples, avoid irrelevant details, get to essentials quickly and interestingly," says Mr. Abelson, author of "Freedom Is As Freedom Does."
