

Women's Single Tax ClubBy Gertrude E. Mackenzie

At a special meeting of the Women's Single Tax Club, the officers for the coming year were elected as follows: president, Mrs. Helene H. McEvoy; vice-president, Mrs. Gertrude E. Mackenzie; director to the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Esther M. Daggit; alternate, Mrs. Bertha M. Davis. Our officers are usually elected at our annual Riverdale picnic, but that pleasant family reunion had to be dispensed with this June—for the first time in 34 years—owing to Mrs. Keeley's failing health and the impossibility of getting help.

In place of the Riverdale picnic, the club held a little outing down river. As two members of the party were not single taxers, but were invited guests, I suggested that our president give a little talk on the subject on our return trip. So, while we were all together, Mrs. McEvoy gave a very good explanation of the Georgist philosophy. Soon after she started on it, a young lieutenant came over and asked if he might listen in, as he was interested; and, in response to our cordial invitation, he came over with his lady friend (a WAC) and joined the group and asked questions. As we landed, I saw him giving Mrs. McEvoy his name and address, so I imagine he'll receive some literature on the subject. I resolved right then and there that hereafter I am going armed with single tax leaflets for distribution when occasion calls.
