

Georgist Journal

Number 100

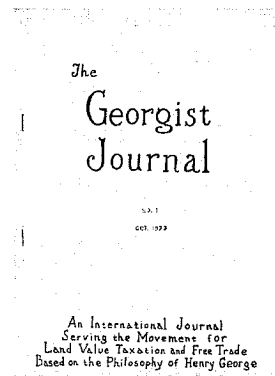

Spring 2004

A Note from the President

Ninety-nine issues ago, Bob Clancy, founder and long-time leader of the Henry George Institute, single-handedly concocted the first edition of The Georgist Journal, serving as its writer, editor, publisher — and even printer! Notwithstanding the somewhat amateurish look of the newborn publication, we (the then-members of the Institute) were immensely proud and pleased, as we still are, with it and its ardent presentation of George's social and economic philosophy.

Now, as evidenced by this hundredth number, the Georgist Journal continues to carry out its basic aim, as well as to offer news and views concerning the active present followers and devotees of Henry George. Under the capable editorial guidance of Lindy Davies, it has attained a position of high respect among today's Georgists. Let us look forward to many more years of this peerless little magazine.

The Georgist movement tends to be scattered and we are not sufficiently informed on what our colleagues elsewhere are doing. There is a need for better communication and we hope to make a step in this direction. And so we appeal to readers to send us news of what they are doing, what they know of activities of their fellow Georgists and other activities of interest, as well as developments in their area worthy of Georgist attention. Better cooperative efforts will surely grow out of better communication.

We also wish to continue as an organ whereby readers may exchange views on matters of mutual interest, economic and philosophical points and ways of promoting our progress.

— Bob Clancy, in GJ #1, October 1973
