

On the New Year

SIRS: The sands of 1943 are running out and we face a new year. It is a time for reviewing and for rededication.

In the recent past it has sometimes been difficult to keep one's faith that "God's in His Heaven" since certainly all has been far from "well with the world." But God is in His Heaven and it is undeniably the solemn duty of Georgists to press forward with our knowledge of how to bring order of a lasting kind out of this world suffering.

With a vigor we have never yet shown, we, each at the top of his ability, must face the new year assignment. Every day will offer its opportunities and its responsibilities for spreading our gospel. May we, with gratitude for the privilege of co-operating in this great contribution to lasting peace, make the dream we had for the past come true in the future, and take for our personal, individual code, that of the soldier who wrote: "I will work: I will save:

code, that of the soldier who wrote: "I will work: I will save: I will sacrifice: I will endure: I will do my utmost, as if the whole struggle depended on me alone."
